

The image shows a technical drawing of a garment front pattern piece. It features two concentric outlines: an outer red line and an inner green line. Both outlines have a curved neckline and armholes. Small perpendicular tick marks, known as notches, are placed along the curves of both the red and green lines to indicate where the pattern pieces should be aligned when sewn together. The word 'FRENTE' is printed in a large, bold, purple, sans-serif font in the center of the pattern piece.
